The second was a Tactical in 45 acp. The third was a Tactical in 9 mm. All three 1911s were superb, except for the firing pin breaking on the Tactical 45. After RIA replaced it, the gun has functioned flawlessly. All my 1911s are accurate. My latest is my home defense 1911, a S&W E series in 45 acp. This smaller, lighter weight 1911 is a joy to ...

Review: Tisas 1911 GI .45 ACP - The Shooter's Log

The Llama s firing mechanism differs considerably in detail from the 1911. The slide is the main area of interest. For illustration purposes, I chose a rather common Commander-length Llama in 9mm Luger. This pistol is a true compact, however, rather than a short slide on a full-length frame. The extractor is of the external type. There is no extractor tunnel in the slide and no firing-pin stop.

The .45 Colt had been designed to give troopers a fighting chance and to drop an Indian war pony at 100 yards. The cavalry was an immensely important and influential department of the Army when the 1911 and the .45 ACP cartridge were being developed. The .45 ACP was actually developed much earlier and chambered in the 1905 Colt.

5 Good Picks for .45 ACP Loads - The Shooter's Log

Yes, the Browning 1911 380 is a sweet little number. It is a very soft shooter as well. My Llama micro 380 is a blowback action the same as the Baby Rock. It is a harsh shooter, even with the extra weight. Browning 1911 380 does have authentic grip angle, comes with two mags. Keep it clean and it will run perfectly and recoils mild. Nice.
